GERMAN WAR "SUB" PUTS INTO NEWPORT

had come in to mail a letter to Count von Bernstorff and asked from the newspaper man his credentials. "Please forward this letter to Count Bernstorff," said the captain, "and report my arrival. They will be glad to hear it."

The correspondence, contained in a single envelope, was mailed at the local postoffice at 3 o'clock and should have started for Washington about an hour later. It should be at the German embassy early tomorrow morning.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—While flying visit of the German war submarine to Newport harbor was the leading topic of discussion among navy officers tonight, it was the probable mission of the submarine which interested them more than any other feature of the submersible or the significance of her trip from Germany as it might effect naval warfare in general. The distance covered by the submarine from Wilhelmshaven is well within the cruising radius of much smaller vessels than the U-53, including numbers of older craft in the American navy.

The merchant submarine Deutschland crossed the Atlantic and returned but it is realized that the appearance of an armed naval underwater boat will create a much more profound impression particularly upon the public mind in this country.

It was expected that the visit would immediately revive rumors of a German submarine base on the north Atlantic coast of radio stations maintained along the American coast line by German interests for the purpose of communicating with the undersea boats. For a submarine patrol off American or Canadian ports, provision must be then made to supply the fuel, torpedoes and food supplies. The average submarine carries not more than 10 to 12 torpedoes at most and since the chances are that several of these would be fired for every hit recorded, it would seem necessary that a reserve supply be kept close at hand.

A majority of the officers around the navy department tonight appeared to think it likely that the U-53 had been sent over either as a convoy for a slower merchant submarine or with the view of threatening Canadian transports and ammunition ships sailing from American ports.

The first trans-Atlantic submarine journey was made by a British fighting craft similar to the American navy's H-type boat, ten of which held the contract. One of the ten went to Gibraltar without stopping her engines. These boats were accompanied by surface craft which carried extra supplies and fuel. This makes the trip of the Deutschland from Bremen to Baltimore and return without a tender, the first really spectacular cruise of the kind.
